Did you know?

Statutes and case law regarding environmental and land use issues change almost every year...

ELULS members are notified of changes to the law through the Treatise, ListServ, and numerous informative seminars and workshops provided throughout the year...

ELULS sponsors seminars and mixers with affiliate members (consultants) to ensure that information is easily transferred between groups...

ELULS continually updates the Treatise to ensure that current statutes and case law is up-to-date.

How does the agency rulemaking process work?

How does one appeal a local government development order?

What level of due diligence is required in a real estate transaction?

Who is liable to clean up contaminated property?

What is the process for receiving a permit to fill wetlands?

Can a local government condemn property for redevelopment?

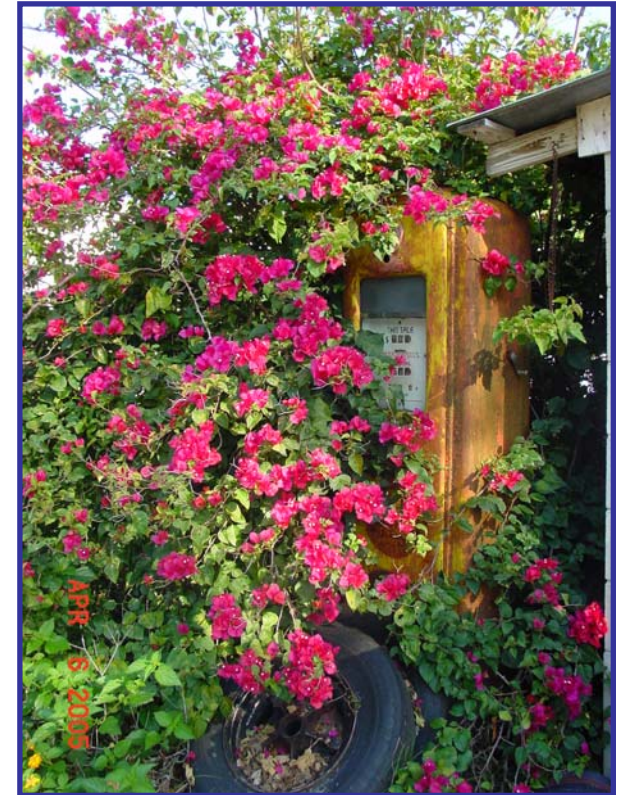

Are attorney's fees recoverable in administrative cases?

What is the burden of proof in administrative cases?

What is the law regarding discharge into water bodies?

As a student member of ELULS, you can find the answers to these and many other environmental and land use law questions

By being a student member of the Environmental and Land Use Law Section, you can keep on top of the ever-changing environmental and land use law landscape.
